Identifying My “Nation”

Lord, who is my nation? Who have You called me to reach?

My present discernment. I believe God has called me to reach leaders and emerging leaders who carry, or are being prepared to carry, consequential responsibility for the lives and flourishing of others. This includes spiritual and Christian leaders; Christians serving in healthcare, especially physicians and trainees; and interns and researchers developing the knowledge, judgment, and capacity through which they will serve. Civic, governmental, political, and societal leaders form a further widening sphere. The spiritual purpose connecting these people is to strengthen those who serve and form those preparing to serve.

My primary and widening fields. The closest and most established expression of this calling lies where my spiritual and professional assignments already converge: Christian leaders, clinicians, physicians, trainees, interns, and researchers. God has repeatedly positioned me to encourage people already serving and to develop people preparing for future responsibility. Spiritual leaders throughout the Church remain a demonstrated field. Civic, governmental, political, and societal leaders appear as the widening horizon that God may open through relationship, service, credibility, maturity, and responsible access.

My nation is leaders and emerging leaders who carry, or are being prepared to carry, consequential responsibility for the lives and flourishing of others.

Geographic scope. The United States is my present geographic field. Latin America is a historically demonstrated international field, especially through my prior approximately decade-long medical and spiritual mission service in the Dominican Republic. That service included clinical care, teaching, preaching, giving, and discipleship in Monte Coca and across the country. The transformation I witnessed in communities and individual lives provides tangible fruit within this part of my calling. Other nations remain the widening horizon as God directs.

Evidence within my formation

A recurring pattern has emerged across my experiences. During ministry encounters connected with Philadelphia and Connecticut, I found myself drawn toward strengthening spiritual leaders and others already carrying responsibility. This has become a governing thread: strengthen those who serve; equip them where God has planted them; and send them renewed into the fields already entrusted to them.

One calling expressed through concentric fields

The groups become coherent when I understand them as concentric fields rather than a collection of unrelated audiences. The innermost field contains people already entrusted to my daily spiritual, clinical, educational, and research service. The next field contains Christian and spiritual leaders serving congregations and communities. The widening field contains leaders whose decisions shape institutions, societies, and nations. The same grace operates through each field: listening closely, discerning wisely, strengthening faithfully, and helping people steward responsibility for others.

Prophetic themes and interpretation

Prophetic words received during my concentrated 2026 formation have included crowns, keys, open doors, wise counsel, kings, heads of state, and discipling nations. I hold these themes prayerfully. Together, they suggest service near people carrying influence, access that God Himself provides, and counsel that must remain submitted to Scripture, humility, accountability, wisdom, and observable fruit.

My calling as a physical and spiritual cardiologist also aligns with this people group. In medicine, I listen carefully to the human heart, interpret consequential information, and help people respond wisely. As a physician scientist, educator, and research leader, I also help physicians, trainees, interns, and researchers develop discernment, rigor, courage, and responsible stewardship. In prophetic formation, I am learning to recognize the heart of God and strengthen people to respond faithfully. Leaders and emerging leaders often carry the hearts, health, learning, and futures of many others. This creates a meaningful point of convergence within my calling.

How I will steward this assignment

My focus is service, faithfulness, strengthening, and formation. I will approach each person with humility, compassion, discretion, courage, and a genuine desire for that person's flourishing and the well-being of those the person will serve. This keeps the calling centered upon faithful stewardship at every level of visibility.

I will continue asking the Lord to refine the particular communities, institutions, regions, and nations within this calling. I will record recurring burdens, relationships, invitations, and fruit. I will also observe where grace for service is already present, where leaders receive strengthening, and where God opens sustainable opportunities to contribute.

Current conclusion

At this stage of Christian International School of the Prophets 2026, I identify my people group as leaders and emerging leaders who carry, or are being prepared to carry, consequential responsibility for others. My closest field includes Christian leaders and Christians in healthcare, especially physicians and trainees, together with interns and researchers developing for service. Spiritual leaders throughout the Church remain a demonstrated field. Civic, governmental, political, and societal leaders form the widening sphere. The United States is the present geographic focus. Latin America is a historically demonstrated field through my prior mission service in the Dominican Republic. Other nations remain an expanding horizon under God's direction.

Strengthen those who serve. Equip them where God has planted them. Send them renewed into the fields already entrusted to them.
